Jeff Huth: World (Wide Web) Traveler

Each Sunday, News-Gazette staff writer Jeff Huth reviews a sports Web site.

This week: <http://www.baseball-almanac.com/ws/yr1967ws.shtml>

As the Cardinals and Red Sox go about deciding the 2004 World Series champion, take a look at their showdown 37 years ago for major league baseball supremacy. For you veteran fans, this site offers a nostalgic look back to a time when World Series games were played during the day and teams won their way in during the regular season, not via playoffs. For younger fans, here's a history lesson on a seven-game series with plenty of star power (Bob Gibson, Carl Yastrzemski, Lou Brock, Steve Carlton, Roger Maris) and an eye-opening number of future baseball broadcasters (Tim McCarver, Ken Harrelson, Mike Shannon). You'll learn there are some parallels between how these teams reached the World Series then and now (as they did this year, the '67 Cardinals rolled to the game's best regular season, winning the NL by 10 1/2 games; the '67 Red Sox took their World Series quest to the absolute wire, winning the AL crown on the final day of the regular season). There's a concise written summary of this Series, box scores of each game and final Series statistics (Ouch! Did Harrelson really go 1 for 13?). Including a photo of the cover of the official '67 Series program was a nice touch (Busch Stadium is prominently displayed). And you can link to career records of each of the players on both teams. We've referred you to baseball-almanac.com before. For baseball fans who crave delving into the game's history, it's the crown jewel of the Internet.
