

Jeff Huth: World (Wide Web) Traveler

Each Sunday, News-Gazette staff writer Jeff Huth reviews a sports Web site.

This week: <http://www.illini-hockey.com/>

These are hard times for hockey fans. NHL owners locked out the players after reaching a contract stalemate. The players are leaving in droves for leagues in Europe. And there's no sign that either side is willing to budge. What's a hockey fan to do? If you haven't already, look closer to home. We can't recommend checking out the Danville Wings because they fled after last season for Indianapolis. But there's still at least one remaining option, thanks to the Illini Hockey Club. If you've never been to a game at the UI Ice Arena, give it a shot. You'll find the price is right, the hockey skilled and the atmosphere — thanks to students who know how to have a good time — infectiously fun. And with the Oct. 1 opener not far off, here's your Web portal to learning all about coach Chad Cassel's squad. It contains all the basics: schedule, roster, statistics, standings and ticket information. The multimedia page is an especially nice touch, with links to photos, screen savers and even video highlights if you have a Windows Media player. And be sure to check out the Team Shop page. (This is not an endorsement, but ...) along with the usual sweatshirts, T-shirts and coffee mugs, you also can purchase — we kid you not — Illini Hockey camisoles and thongs. Bet you won't find that on the Blackhawks' Web page.
